

This course will investigate how American cities are portrayed in music, literature, film, advertising, television, theater and visual art. The class will trace how these mediums affect the American perception of cities and how this perception has changed over time.