

01:050:366

Folklore of American Occupational and Regional Groups

This course features both occupational and regional folklore. Occupational folklore is a branch of folklife that deals with such groups as cowboys, coal miners, seafarers, and loggers. Through documentary film, we examine their traditional customs and practices.

Similarly, regional folklore deals with such areas as the Mid-Atlantic, the Francophone South, Appalachia, and the Deep South. Each region has its own tales, songs, superstitions, beliefs, rituals, crafts, and customs.